Written Words of Appreciation from both Client and Lawyer

We know that in many cases pro bono work can be frustrating and difficult, but lawyers now and then have a case that makes it all worthwhile. The words of appreciation below are one example:

From the client: "I want to thank you for your help and let you know that [the] court proceeding was successful. Your agency has the appreciation of our family and our respect for the wonderful work you do"

From the above client's lawyer (who spent 45 hours on this case plus 15 hours of staff time): "It was my privilege to represent [this client], and I hope you send me more worthy cases such as hers."

Pro Bono Attorneys

Thank you to Bob Butler for spending several pro bono hours successfully representing a client in his administrative hearing who was appealing a denial of unemployment benefits. In these times we are seeing increasing numbers of persons who are being laid off or let go.

Thank you to Greg Greenan who defended clients in a rental case involving pest infestation and met the client's objectives allowing them an orderly departure from the premises, with time to move, without a judgment against them. Greg spent more than 25 hours on this case.

Thank you to Hugh Lewis who helped an elderly client resolve a dispute involving a charge for a waterline repair in which the client's bill apparently included charges for additional damage done by the repairman. This client thanked us in writing for "the wonderful lawyer" we provided her.

The income tax created more criminals than any other single act of government.
